Possible break in month-old Elite strike

JERUSALEM POST STAFF
TEL AVIV. — Mr. Abba Frumcenko, general manager of Elite, yesterday agreed to introduce job evaluation, one of the demands made by the Histadrut in the current negotiations to end the strike.

Mr. Frumcenko was reacting to a communication he received from Mr. Menahem Ariav, Secretary of the Upper Nazareth Labour Council, who suggested that work in the Ce De plant in Nazareth could be resumed immediately on the terms proposed by the management a month ago, when negotiations broke down at the last moment, but on condition that the management agreed to job evaluation.

The Histadrut insists on job evaluation to eliminate the practice of underpaying women on allegedly "light" jobs.

However, Mr. Eliezer Bar-Haim, Secretary of the Food Workers Union, told The Post last night that Mr. Ariav was not authorized to speak on behalf of Ce De's workers. He said the strike was a national one and noted that job evaluation was a major but not the only union demand.

Mr. Gideon Ben-Israel, Chief Labour Dispute Arbitrator, told The Jerusalem Post he considered the development "positive" though he would not predict when the strike would end. It began just a month ago.

SOVIET 'RANSOM TAX' ALREADY BEING APPLIED

The first victim of the Soviet levy imposed on Jewish professionals wanting to emigrate to Israel is a Moscow man, Vladimir Zaslavski, INA reported from London yesterday. The news agency said that according to Jewish sources in Moscow, Zaslavski was informed by the authorities that his exit visa was available but that he would have to pay 15,000 rubles (about £70,000) before receiving it.

Zaslavski, whose profession was not given, cannot raise the money, the report said.

In London, Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the World Jewish Congress, called the new measure "not just a new form of harassment and curtailment of elementary Jewish rights... The Soviet Union has understandably prided itself on its great progress in free education for all. It is a blot on this record when the right to education is exploited in order to penalize people who have availed themselves of it," he said.

An AP report quotes Moscow Jewish sources as saying that at least 50 Jews in Moscow are under investigation aimed at garnering evidence that would establish the existence of a "Zionist" or "anti-Soviet" conspiracy. The interrogation ostensibly concerns the trial of Lazar Lubarsky, of Rostov-on-Don, the sources said.

Tourists returning recently from Russia told AP the authorities are campaign against the Soviet oppressive measure.

In Moscow, a member of the unofficial Committee on Human Rights, yesterday called on Soviet authorities to rescind the tax, which he called "illegal and immoral."

Physicist Valery N. Chaldize told Western newsmen "the situation is like a restaurant where a guest is invited to eat without charge and then is presented with a huge bill."

In Israel, the national committee of the Histadrut-affiliated Lawyers' Association, termed the tax a violation of international law and of the U.N.'s Declaration of the Rights of Man. The committee called on Soviet jurists to demand of the Soviet Government that it act in keeping with the "rule of law."

Tel Aviv Maccabi 'tired' after 'Frisco fiasco'

JERUSALEM POST REPORTER
TEL AVIV. — "The trip has been a failure. We are all tired," Tel Aviv Maccabi footballer Moshe Assis told Israel Radio in San Francisco yesterday following the 4-0 defeat of Maccabi to the North California All Stars.

Reports of the game in California said the Maccabi players constantly argued with the referee and were loudly booed by the crowd, which included many Jews and Israelis. When the score stood 2-0, Maccabi players argued the referee's decision to award a free kick to the All Stars. Maccabi's Bello jumped on the referee and was ordered off the field.

Later Ozari threw the ball at the referee in a disputed decision. When the score was 4:0 against Maccabi, with 15 minutes still to play, the Israeli players marched off the field. Israeli spectators told the radio that the Maccabi footballers' unsporting behaviour did great harm to Israel's sports reputation in the U.S.

The game in San Francisco followed four previous defeats and only one win for the Israeli soccer champions on a scheduled 10-game tour of the U.S. The trip was a "prize" for Maccabi's winning the National League last season.

Speaking to a meeting of The Jerusalem Post editorial staff, Mr. Stein said that President Nixon and Secretary of State William Rogers would find protests on the Soviet policy — to them and to the Soviet Congress — "embarrassing" at a time when the two great powers were seeking to improve relations.

Mr. Stein is President of the United Synagogue of America (Conservative) and chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major Jewish Organizations.

He indicated that protests against the Soviet policy must be escalated quickly if they are to be effective. Delay, he said, would make it more difficult for the Kremlin to reconsider its position.

Secretary of State William Rogers, accompanied by some of his top aides, discussed the problem with Mr. Stein and two other Jewish leaders, Mr. Max Fisher of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds, and Mr. Richard Maza of the American Council for Soviet Jewry, in Washington last Friday. Mr. Stein said that the meeting was called at the Secretary's initiative. With Mr. Rogers were Assistant Secretary of State Joseph Sisco, Mr. Richard Davies of the Soviet Desk at the State Department, and White House aide Leonard Garment.

Mr. Davies told the Jewish leaders that the U.S. had been unable to obtain a copy of the decree. According to Mr. Stein, unconfirmed reports reaching New York indicate that Communist Party Secretary Leonid Brezhnev signed the document.

Mr. Stein said he expects to meet with Mr. Rogers again in about two weeks. In the meantime, he said he would not be surprised if the problem of the ransom decree — which he called a "wall of rubles" against emigration — was discussed at the Republican Convention in Miami Beach this week.

If there is no change in policy soon, Mr. Stein said, American Jews may take their case to Congress, to indicate their "strong feelings" about improvement in U.S.-Soviet relations at a time when the Russians "do violence to the U.N. system of social justice and human rights."

He said that he thought that the Russians wanted to improve relations with the U.S., and "this is why there is hope that they can be moved from their present course."

Asked about the Moscow summit, Mr. Stein said that he had no hard information about what actually was discussed, other than the fact that views were exchanged on Soviet Jewish emigration. "All we know," he said, "is what has come in the form of leaks from senators, and incautious remarks from governors."

He said he would be "shocked" if there had been any agreement on quotas of Jews who would be allowed to leave the Soviet Union.

The talks, he said, probably centred on "an agreement in principle on the right to emigrate."

It was totally out of the question, he said, for Jews outside the Soviet Union to raise the "ransom money." Exit visa fees graduated by educational level represented "progressive degrees of imprisonment," he said.

The problems of Soviet Jewry did not affect party politics in the U.S., Mr. Stein emphasized. "This is an apolitical matter, and we are determined to keep it that way."

Tourism Minister Moshe Kol has been invited by Mr. Stein to open festivities for the State's 25th anniversary in New York. Accompanied by Mr. Yehuda Helman, director of the Conference, he called on the Minister in Jerusalem yesterday.

Mr. Kol's participation in the New York ceremony is subject to Cabinet approval.

The invitation proposes that Mr. Kol bring to New York the 25th anniversary torch, to be lit by President Shazar. According to the proposed schedule, the torch is due at Kennedy Airport on September 26, when it will light a giant 25 branched candelabra at the airfield's Synagogue.

Mr. Stein said that the meeting was called at the Secretary's initiative. With Mr. Rogers were Assistant Secretary of State Joseph Sisco, Mr. Richard Davies of the Soviet Desk at the State Department, and White House aide Leonard Garment.

Mr. Stein said he expects to meet with Mr. Rogers again in about two weeks. In the meantime, he said he would not be surprised if the problem of the ransom decree — which he called a "wall of rubles" against emigration — was discussed at the Republican Convention in Miami Beach this week.

Mapam youth defy leaders to hold Bir'im rally

Jerusalem Post Staff

A rally held by Mapam's youth in Jerusalem with the participation of Greek Catholic Archbishop Raya has strained internal relations within Mapam.

The rally, held in the Tsavta Club, with 150 participating, took place in spite of an earlier veto by the party's national leadership — the "Rikuz" which met at party headquarters in Tel Aviv yesterday morning. It ordered the youth division to call off the rally, at which youth secretary Latif Dori was scheduled to speak. The Mapam secretary was summoned to meet this morning to discuss the matter.

The Jerusalem branch of the youth division, said the ruling by Rikuz was in violation of the official Mapam stand on the Bir'im-Ikrit issue.

At the rally, Archbishop Raya called on those joining his procession today not to be "lured into conflict with any counter-demonstrators." He reiterated that the loyal support shown by the villagers of Ikrit and Bir'im for the State on many occasions, was proof that the claims of security risks in returning them to the villages were fallacious.

Other speakers at the rally were Dr. Amnon Kapeluk of "Al Eamishum" and Mr. Pinhas Genosser of the Communist daily "Kol Ha'am." Both cited examples showing that strong and united public opinion can force the Government to change its stand.

Archbishop Raya said the only reason he joined the campaign was to prove to the world that the Jews and Arabs can live in peace.

Mapam's political secretary Natfali Feder last night told The Post that the leadership did not insist that the rally be cancelled, but asked that it be postponed for several days, finding it unacceptable that the rally be held on the eve of the procession, which it had considered an "unacceptable tactic" against the Government.

The advertisements running in The Jerusalem Post for the past few days appealing to Israelis to demonstrate in Jerusalem today on the Bir'im-Ikrit issue were placed through Yedophone, the advertising agency. The advertisements signed by Archbishop Raya "on behalf of the Public Committee for the people of Ikrit and Bir'im" were paid for by the Haolam Hazeh Party, it was reliably learned.

The leader of the Maronite community, Bishop Joseph Khoury, wound up his three-week visit to Israel yesterday and returned to his permanent residence in Lebanon via Rosh Hanikra. The Bishop made no public statements on the Bir'im case during his stay.

The former inhabitants of Bir'im are all Maronites.

Cairo Radio attacks Gaza Mayor

JERUSALEM POST ARAB AFFAIRS REPORTER. The Egyptians yesterday launched a vicious verbal attack on Mayor Rashed Shawa of Gaza, accusing him of consolidating links between the Gaza Strip and Jordan and trying to alienate it from its traditional alliance with Cairo.

"It is Egypt the Gaza Strip is associated with," the Cairo State radio said in an afternoon commentary usually devoted to discussing the major political issues facing Egypt. It threatened to stir up an "armed struggle" to topple the City administration of Mr. Shawa, who recently met Jordan's King Hussein twice within four weeks.

The Egyptians incited the Gazans against the "intellectual Mayor" and promised that "only Egypt would liberate the occupied territories."

Cairo Radio also claimed that Mr. Shawa was working together with the Mayor of Hebron, Shekha Mohammed Ali Ja'abari, and in conjunction with the Israeli authorities to lay the foundations for King Hussein's projected federation between Jordan, the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. "It is Egypt the Arabs in the occupied territories want and not King Hussein," the radio said.

On Monday, Mr. Shawa lunched with Defence Minister Moshe Dayan. The Mayor told him he had obtained 3,000 Jordanian passports for Gaza youngsters who wanted to attend colleges in Arab countries. He explained that they will enjoy the same status as residents of the West Bank.

RABBINATE POLL DEBACLE Letter on town rabbis made public

Ben-Aharon: end to social classes

RISHON LEZION. — Histadrut Secretary-General Yitzhak Ben-Aharon said last night his aim was the abolition of social classes in Israel. He was addressing a 90th anniversary Labour Council rally here.

The rally was also addressed by Mr. David Ben-Gurion, who received a rousing ovation from the crowd of 3,000 persons assembled in the open square outside the Labour Council offices.

The Histadrut chief said the aim must be to "have everyone enjoy the same standard of living and exactly the same level of income, culture, education and housing."

He reminded Mr. Ben-Gurion that he organized one of the country's first strikes in the Rishon wine cellars before the First World War.

In the letter made public yesterday, the committee notes that since July 27, it has repeatedly asked the Chief Rabbinate Council to check the list. It draws attention to the fact that by law the elections have to be held by October 16. Of the 56 days left, the committee will need at least 45 days to complete preparations — after the list is approved.

Committee member Aharon Uzan opposed the sending of the letter. He asked that the committee approve the list as it stood, since the Rabbinate Council did not respond to repeated requests for its approval.

The High Court yesterday dismissed an order nisi against the Religious Affairs Minister and the elections committee, which it had issued on Sunday. The order was issued at the request of David Frenkel, a member of Jerusalem's Religious Council, who complained that the list of 11 Jerusalem rabbis published by the elections committee was not valid, since the committee refused to recognize 13 additional rabbis paid only a partial salary.

The court accepted the argument presented by Mr. Meir Shamgar, the Attorney-General, which stated that the committee was entitled to make this decision, and gave an opportunity for objections to be presented. The application by Mr. Frenkel, Mr. Shamgar pointed out, came more than a month after the list was published, and did not justify the delay it would cause in the election procedures.

The Rabbinate Council election committee, headed by Mr. Mordechai Surkis, M.K., yesterday made public a letter it had sent to the Rabbinate Council asking them once more to check over the lists of town rabbis drawn up by the committee.

The preparations for the Chief Rabbinate Council elections are being held up by absence of a Rabbinate subcommittee which has to check the validity of the list of town rabbis. Chief Rabbi Untermann has appointed one of the three subcommittee members, but Chief Rabbi Nissim has not done so yet. The third member is to be appointed by both Chief Rabbis jointly.

The list of town rabbis is crucial to the elections, since its approval by the Council establishes the rabbi's eligibility to take part in voting at assemblies which choose electors to the Chief Rabbinate electoral college.

Dichter report on U.S. immigration studied

By GEORGE LEONOF
Jerusalem Post Reporter

Swish Agency departments began studying the Dichter report on U.S. immigration with a view to implementing its recommendations.

The report, prepared at the request of the Agency's Chairman, Louis Pincus, by the well-known Institute of Deep Motivational Research in the U.S., runs to 280 pages. Its basic technique to analyse the psychology of American Jewry. It addresses mainly the Agency's immigration policies and procedures in the U.S.

The director of the Institute, Dr. Ernest Dichter, also studied the reactions of newcomers from America to Israel, and the best way of dealing with them as a result of feedback.

The report was completed by the end of March at a reported cost more than $100,000 — "money spent," Mr. Pincus told The Post.

The Agency chairman added that he was never any question of holding the report. "On the contrary, I found it both interesting and valuable: so much so that I suggested Dr. Dichter supplement it with concrete suggestions as to various aspects of the Agency's work could be improved, and he did."

The report was at no time deli-

but absences abroad and the illness of key Agency personnel caused inadvertent delays in tackling it methodically.

Among Dr. Dichter's suggestions was a training programme for the Agency's emissaries in the U.S. which, while not qualifying them as psychologists, would at least make them aware of the problems involved in dealing with prospective immigrants. "One must also bear in mind that an Israeli emissary sent to work in the U.S. himself faces a problem of adjustment," Mr. Pincus pointed out.

"We have already begun to install social workers in immigrant absorption centres," he disclosed, "not because the newcomers are social cases, but because a social worker is qualified to deal with the various emotional and domestic problems, as well as those of transplantation and others, as they arise."

Dr. Dichter's suggestions include an outline of a seven-lesson course for emissaries. Another of his suggestions concerns an improved system of feedback.

The Dichter report was prepared with the active assistance of Mr. Nahum Golan, former head of the Agency's Immigration Department in the U.S. He is now studying the report together with Mr. Uzi Narkiss, head of the Department, and other Agency workers concerned with immigration from America.

TEL AVIV. — Five Rehovot youths charged with repeatedly raping a 14-year-old girl were remanded yesterday by the District Court here until their trial.

The youths did not deny the rape charges, but claimed they never threatened to kill the girl if she complained to the police, as specified in the charge sheet.

Three of the youths, aged 22, are Menahem Masmi, Yair Bashari and Benjamin Mousal. The other two are 17-year-olds, and as they are minors their names were withheld.

Mousal and one of the younger boys told the court they did not assault the girl, but Judge Haim Dvorin noted that as far as the law was concerned it makes no difference whether they actually raped her or were merely present during the incident.

On the evening of August 1, the prosecutor said, the girl was on her way to a party in the Zarnaga quarter, when one of the younger accused offered her a ride. He and his friends allegedly took her to the Palmachim beach, where they beat her and raped her.

Masmi, Bashari and one of the minors forced themselves on her, and when Mousal and the other minor declined to do so, the first three repeated the act. They then brought her back to Rehovot and told her they would kill her if she complained to the police, the prosecutor charged.

Masmi, Bashari and Mousal, the court was told, have previous convictions. Mousal, who has the largest number of prior convictions, told the court his brother was shot dead by a policeman several months ago while evading arrest. (11am)

The basalt quarry was opened yesterday at Ramat Poriya, about one kilometre from the hospital. Believed to be the first in the country, it has a capacity of 1,200 tons of stone products a day, including aggregate for road construction, for ready concrete mix plants in the area and for the building industry.

The quarry, a ILL.7m. investment of Kutzat Kineret, has highly automated equipment and can be operated by one person from a control room. (Kan Erde)

Tel Aviv concert shell finished

TEL AVIV. — The Tel Aviv Arts and Literature Fund has completed a huge mobile acoustic shell for open-air concerts in city parks.

The 12m.-high blue shell was presented to the press yesterday by fund director Matityahu Kalor and Dr. Yeshayahu Spiro, vice-chairman of the fund, and representatives of Omant Le'am, which also gave money. The shell cost IL200,000.

It was designed by Arnon Adar, who helped construct the shell at the Caesarea Amphitheatre.

Dr. Spiro announced that now that the shell was in place, a series of free, open-air concerts will commence in the Yarkon Park. The first one is set for Saturday at 8 p.m. It will be a performance by the 90-member Philharmonic Youth Orchestra playing works by Verdi, Beethoven and Liszt.

On the following Wednesday, there will be a concert by the Thud Hakibbutz choir and the West Galilee Folk Dance Troupe. On Monday, September 4, at 8 p.m. there will be a concert by the Army Band. Some IL150,000 have been allocated for the concerts.

Chairs will be available for hire at IL1. The public can also sit on the grass. (11am)

I.P.O. LEAVING FOR AMERICAS

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The Israel Philharmonic Orchestra is leaving next week for the American continent to give 35 concerts in less than two months. Fifteen concerts are scheduled for the U.S., and the rest will be divided between Canada, Mexico, Venezuela, Brazil and Argentina.

The orchestra will be back on October 24, four days before the opening concert of the new season, the press was told yesterday.

The tour is sponsored by the Israel-American Cultural Foundation and the Foreign Ministry. The price of tickets, however ("some sold at special prices in Jewish communities"), is expected to prevent any financial loss, according to Mr. Abe Cohen, secretary of the IPO, and Mr. Elhanan Bergman, of the orchestra management.

Mr. Zubin Mehta, musical director of the IPO, will be conducting all the concerts, except for one in New York to be conducted by Leonard Bernstein. Artur Rabinovich, Gregor Piatigorsky, Daniel Barenboim, Yitzhak Perlman and Miriam Fried will be among the soloists.

The orchestra has included two Israeli works — Yosef Tal's Second Symphony and Paul Ben-Haim's "Psalms" — on its programme, which will also include works by Mozart, Brahms, Dvorzak, Mahler and Stravinsky.

Winter rains bring summer brush fires

ASHEKELON. — Last winter's abundant rainfall was indirectly responsible for the high incidence of brush fires in the Ashkelon region during the past three months, local fire chief Mordechai Yerushalmy said yesterday.

He explained that last winter's heavy rains encouraged the growth of high vegetation, providing more combustible matter for summer fires partly caused by careless farmers burning trash and brush. Over 400 fires were reported in the area during the summer, causing IL500,000 worth of damage. This was considerably more than in last year's corresponding period.

Slum-dwellers demonstrate for housing

By YA'ACOV ARDON
Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — About three dozen men, women and children are camping outside City Hall in protest against slum conditions in their quarter, the Municipal housing project in the Bayside Industrial zone.

The 500 small, closely built homes were built by the City in 1950 for immigrants who needed housing quickly. The area soon deteriorated, and was included by the Municipality in its slum clearance project. Two-thirds of its residents have already been rehoused elsewhere.

The residents complain that the abandoned houses have become littered with refuse, that vermin and rats abound and that they suffer from the tons of dust released by the adjoining stone crushing plant. Sewage and sanitary conditions in general are intolerable, they said.

Acting Mayor Yerushalmy Zeisel explained yesterday that the stone crushing mill was operating legitimately in an industrial zone, and the Municipality could not close it down. The residents had been given priority for rehousing and during the past four years most of them had already been given homes elsewhere.

The demonstrators decided on their public protest after the success of the residents of another slum area, the ma'abara at Kiryat Haim West. Their week-long sit-down demonstration outside City Hall at the end of May speeded up their transfer to better and larger homes.

'After Israel' 100 tourists seeing Jordan

Jerusalem Post Arab Affairs Reporter

About 100 tourists crossed Al-Jubayl Bridge into Jordan yesterday for a three-day tour of great interest. They are due back to Israel by the weekend.

Yesterday's was the largest group of tourists to cross in a single day under the new scheme of two-way tourist traffic which now is in its second month.

The trips are arranged by East Jerusalem travel agencies in coordination with Israeli travel companies. One of the East Jerusalem agencies is conducting tours in cooperation with SSTA, the Israel Students Tourists Association.

SSTA recently issued a form letter headlined "After Israel — see Jordan." It offered a three-day tour to Amman, Jarash and "fabulous Petra," at $55 a person. The price covers transportation, full-board accommodation at the Philadelphia hotel in Amman, English-speaking guides and lunch plus horse" rides in Petra.

Netanya beach terrorist still sought

Jerusalem Post Reporter

NETANYA. — All 60 persons detained Monday after a time bomb was found on the crowded beach here have been released. A police spokesman told The Jerusalem Post last night that their alibis had checked out.

The bomb was dismantled before it exploded. All during the day, police handled calls from persons who claimed to have seen a person that fitted the description given in The Jerusalem Post and other papers.

Based on the descriptions given by several eyewitnesses, police have put together an identikit picture of the person who placed the 1.2 kg. explosive charge hidden inside a duffel bag on an empty chair on the beach here.

Nat'l Insurance strike continues, except in J'm

A general meeting of the 400 employees at the National Insurance Institute's head office in Jerusalem yesterday formally approved the recommendation of their works committee under which they returned to their jobs last week. But reports came in from branches in the rest of the country indicating that the majority of the staff of 1,700 are still continuing to strike.

The Jerusalem Post's Haifa bureau reports that the Institute's Haifa employees yesterday voted to continue their strike by a vote of 78 to four, with two abstentions.

The general meetings were called by the national staff committee which recommended a return to work in compliance with an order from the Jerusalem District Labour Court on Sunday. The court gave both sides in the dispute until this morning to report on the steps taken to reach an agreement.

Witness held for not intervening

ACRE. — A man suspected of witnessing a rape assault on a young woman without coming to her aid was detained by the Acre police on Monday.

The complainant, a 17-year-old girl from a village in the south, said she had been vacationing in Acre. On Sunday evening she made the acquaintance of a man who invited her for a stroll in the municipal park, where he allegedly raped her.

The police have detained another man who they suspect witnessed the assault without intervening or summoning help.

Police say they know the identity of the suspected rapist, but have not yet made an arrest. (11am)

Sodomy suspect's remand period shortened

TEL AVIV. — The remand period of a man suspected of committing sodomy on children was reduced by the District Court here yesterday. Defence counsel had appealed Monday's Magistrate's Court order remanding him for a second 15 day period.

District Court Judge Elisha Sheinbaum said the failure of police to transmit documents from the national headquarters to a station was not sufficient reason to hold a man in custody for an additional fortnight.

The man, 50, was arrested on a complaint from a man whose son was allegedly one of the victims. The boy, 13, in whose possession the father found IL30, told of a man who took boys for rides along the coastal road, allowed them to drive his car, then took them to the Holon cemetery, where he paid them to allow him to commit sodomy.

Police told the court they had completed their investigation of six such cases involving the suspect, but had yet to finish checking into six more, about which they learned from the suspect himself. They had not yet instituted court proceedings, they said, because the necessary forms had been delayed in arriving from National Police Headquarters. Defence Counsel said the suspect is mentally disturbed and will be institutionalized.

Judge Sheinbaum ordered the remand extended until Friday, instead of the 15 days ordered by the Magistrate's Court. (11am)

Indian Jews in Haifa organize

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — A group of former Indians living in the Haifa area have established an Association of Indian Jews in Israel.

Messrs. Elysa Ben Elyahu and Ariel Hayena were chosen as an ad hoc committee empowered to contact additional members from other cities, pending the convention of national conference. They are to seek the cooperation of existing organizations of the 22,000 Indian immigrants in Israel.

In the first resolution passed by the committee they called on the government and the bus cooperatives to provide free travel to soldiers in uniform.

Plots for rent in northern townships

The National Lands Authority plans to rent out 100 building plots in the North. The half-dunam plots will be leased to whoever undertakes to build a home for himself on them, it was officially announced yesterday.

They are located in Kiryat Shmona, Ma'alot, Upper Nazareth, Upper Ufa, Shlomi and Yokheam.

The Housing Ministry will make available to the would-be home-owners mortgages covering part of building costs. The recipients will be chosen by lot. The authorities promise more details on the plots and precise locations in a brochure to be issued shortly.

New plan for quick help to road victims

A decision in principle was taken yesterday to go ahead with installing a rapid communications system to get help to persons injured in motor accidents. In the first stage, stretch of highway between Tel Aviv and Hadera will be affected.

The decision was taken by an inter-ministerial committee on help-to-accident victims headed by Communications Minister Shimon Peres. The spokesman of the Ministry of the system would be in operation inside of a year. Telephone lines linked directly to Magen David Adom in Tel Aviv will be set up on both sides of the dual highway at intervals of three kilometres. It will not be necessary dial to call an ambulance equipped to give on-the-spot first aid during the critical first minutes or injury.

The Tel Aviv-Hadera stretch was chosen because it is the most heavily travelled road in the country and at the same time already has phone lines right at hand, reducing the cost of initial installation.

New phone lines can use push-buttons

Jerusalem Post Economic Correspondent

Teirad is currently producing 20,000 telephone lines of the new Crossbar type, which will allow the installation of push-button phones, according to a company spokesman.

First beneficiaries will be new subscribers, but they will not get the push-button telephones just yet. The product is still under development in Teirad.

However, certain advantages will accrue from the new lines even with the old phone set. A person going away on holiday can leave instructions that anyone dialling his home should be automatically connected instead to the number of the place where he is staying. Or he can instruct that the phone be confined to incoming calls only (making it unnecessary to lock the dial), or that the phone be limited to outgoing local calls, not interurban ones.

When push-button units become available, dialling will be easier for subscribers served by the new Crossbar exchanges. Anyone making a call has only to touch the successive figures. Should the number be engaged, he does not have to do the finger-tip dialling all over again; just press a button, and the number re-dials itself.

A further advantage claimed for the Crossbar electro-magnetic system is fewer errors in making connections, less wear and tear and less maintenance.

Teirad produces 20,000 lines a year, and will soon (with the construction of new larger premises in Lod) be producing 50,000. In order to facilitate the rapid expansion of the phone network, the company has manufactured mobile exchanges to be installed on trailers. They each have 1,000 lines. "As it takes five years to build a permanent exchange, you can imagine how these mobile units are helping to fill gaps," the spokesman said.

The firm's latest expansion is in the field of electronics. Teirad's research and development department employs 100 engineers and technicians. According to the department's chief, Mr. Yigal Kochavi, the electronics side will outgrow the rest, so that work for the posts and telephone authorities will account for only 40 per cent of output. This forecast relates to a five-year plan for expanding the plant to 2,500 workers and output to IL150m., of which 15 per cent (or $4.5m.) will be exports.

Speaking recently at an anniversary meeting in Teirad, Mr. Meir Amit, managing director of Koor Industries, declared that this venture illustrates the benefits of co-operation between the Histadrut and private enterprise. (Teirad belongs half to Koor and half to the Consolidated Near East Company.)

Platform adopted GOP promises Israel military, economic aid

By SAM LIPSKI Jerusalem Post Correspondent MIAMI BEACH. — The Republican National Convention yesterday formally accepted the party's platform, which promises continued military and economic aid to Israel, while denouncing the "irresponsible proposals" of the Democrats to "slash the defence forces of the United States."

The platform plank, drafted and prepared at White House level in consultation with the National Security Council, pledges to "maintain our tactical forces in Europe and the Mediterranean area at adequate strength and high level of readiness."

While the Democratic platform made a similar pledge in broad terms the Republicans hit at defence cuts proposed by Senator George McGovern.

The Republican platform cites specifically the plan to cut the strength of the U.S. fleet by reducing aircraft carriers from 16 to six and unilateral withdrawals from Europe which "would increase the threat of war to the Middle East and gravely menace Israel. We flatly reject these dangerous proposals."

REFUGEE AID

The platform declares a Republican administration would continue to prevent the development of a military imbalance, would support programmes of economic assistance which have helped Israel to achieve a nine per cent annual economic growth rate, and would continue special refugee assistance.

Amin decides to let Asian citizens stay

KAMPALA (Reuter). — President Idi Amin said here yesterday that Asians holding Ugandan citizenship would not be expelled from Uganda if they could prove their citizenship status.

Speaking at a luncheon in honour of Sudanese Foreign Minister Dr. Mansour Khaled, General Amin said "Asians who are Ugandan citizens will not be required to leave the country."

According to the Ugandan Information Ministry, he said that under the second phase of the government's programme to put the economy of Uganda under Ugandan control, the citizenship claims of all Asians holding Ugandan passports would be carefully checked.

"Those who will be found to have dual citizenship will be given notice to leave the country," the Information Ministry quoted Amin as saying.

General Amin said there was "nothing racist in what he was doing since his policy was designed to improve the economic position of Uganda as a whole."

His decision not to expel the 23,000 Asians holding Ugandan passports came less than 24 hours after he rejected an appeal from Ugandan students to do so.

A verification campaign to check the citizenship claims of Asians holding Ugandan passports was launched two weeks ago and is due to end next month. Diplomats estimate that about 10,000 Asian Ugandan passport holders will have their citizenship revoked due to defects in their citizenship papers when the campaign is completed.

Britain said yesterday that 15,000 Asians holding British passports will begin trying out within a few weeks.

In the first announcement of its plans to meet the November 7 expulsion deadline on more than 60,000 Asians, most of whom hold British passports, Britain's High Commissioner, Mr. Richard Slater, said 3,000 Asian heads of families would immediately receive entry certificates to permit them and their dependents to settle in Britain.

"This means a movement inside the next few weeks of about 15,000 or more Ugandan Asians who claim British citizenship," he said.

KREMLIN FIRES FILM HEAD SOVIET CINEMA LACKS PRINCIPLES

MOSCOW (Reuter). — The Kremlin yesterday announced the dismissal of the Soviet Union's cinema chief and criticized Russian filmmakers for imitating foreign films and giving exaggerated attention to those who lack moral principles.

A brief "Pravda" announcement said Mr. Alexei Romanov, chairman of the Cinematography Committee for seven years, had been replaced by Mr. Philipp Yermash. A front page party decree, also published in "Pravda," attacked the work of the Soviet cinema, saying it was not doing enough to show social, economic and cultural changes in the U.S.S.R.

Observers here interpret the criticism as part of a recent general ideological crackdown which has been gaining momentum for nearly three months.

The decree accuses the committee of 64-year-old Mr. Romanov of lowering its ideological criteria. It avoided mentioning him by name, but the simultaneous announcement of his dismissal clearly meant that he was held responsible for the failures.

The decree said: "There have been attempts at uncritical borrowing of the methods of foreign cinematography, alien to the art of socialist realism."

The lengthy decree did not single out any Soviet film by name. Observers believe authorities avoid public mention of films or plays of which they do not entirely approve because this might stimulate public curiosity to see them.

'Cod war' looms between Britain and Iceland

LONDON (AP). — At least 80 British trawlers were steaming for Iceland's troubled fishing grounds yesterday in what was shaping up to a new "cod war" over Iceland's decision to bar its waters to foreign fishing vessels.

A spokesman for the trawler officers' guild of Hull, a major British fishing port, said the ships would continue to fish within the 50-mile limit, proclaimed by Iceland from September 1 despite an interim ruling rejecting the limit by the International Court of Justice at The Hague.

The trawler guild's spokesman said four British Royal Navy Fisheries protection vessels would patrol Icelandic waters in pairs from September 1 to defend the trawlers.

The British Government had also issued instructions to British trawler skippers on how to proceed if Icelandic gunboats attempted to prevent them from fishing, the spokesman said.

The Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries declined to comment on these instructions.

"We are only concerned with civilian support vessels equipped with medical and other supplies and three of these will be on station," a spokesman said.

A naval spokesman of the Ministry of Defence declined to comment whether any Royal Navy ships would be in the vicinity of September 1.

"We have made contingency plans if anything boils up," he said. "If the government decides to send ships to Iceland, then they will be sent."

The trawler guild's spokesman said the instructions carried by kippers were:

- to continue fishing within the new 50-mile limit but to keep outside Iceland's internationally recognized 12-mile limit.
- to ignore any Icelandic orders to stop fishing and not to surrender to them.
- to keep cool and avoid provocation.
- "We are determined to keep on fishing our traditional grounds," said Capt. Dick Taylor, the guild's president. "I see no alternative to this developing into another cod war. Sooner or later there will be a confrontation."

Swami plans 'peace bomb' on Republicans

NORFOLK, Virginia (AP). — Swami Vishnu-Devananda took off from here on Monday in a plane painted with moonbeams and smiles, vowing to drop a "peace bomb" on the Republican National Convention in Miami Beach.

The self-styled "Flying Swami," who has dropped his peace bombs on such world trouble spots as Northern Ireland and the Middle East, says he plans to drop a "bomb" — of peace leaflets and flower petals — on the convention center.

"This entire country is giving off the most terrible karmic vibrations which will eventually lead to fires and floods here," the swami said.

A native of south India, the swami describes himself as the developer of the largest yoga organization in North America. He now lives in Quebec, Canada, at the Sivananda Ashram Yoga Camp he founded there.

The Liberian tanker Oswego Guardian wallows low in the water as she heads for Cape Town after Monday's collision.

Heaviest ever sea collision

CAPE TOWN (UPI). — The Liberian tanker Oswego Guardian, trailing an oil slick almost two kilometers wide, inched toward Cape Town yesterday following the heaviest tonnage collision on record.

Rescue ships and South African Air Force planes located only four of the crew of 50 of another Liberian tanker, the 43,339-ton (100,613 deadweight) Texanita, which exploded and sank minutes after colliding with the 48,320-ton (95,608 deadweight) Oswego Guardian on Monday. Officials said the total tonnage involved was a record for sea collisions.

The Texanita's Greek captain, Juoriois Salvadoros, told rescuers he and his two fellow survivors heard a "tremendous explosion" which "tipped her guts out" about 50 sea miles east of Cape Agulhas, the southernmost point of the African continent. Salvadoros, Greek seaman Panos Vasiliou and Chinese seaman Shiou Jeou Jin were taken by a South African cargo vessel, the S.A. Constantia, to Mossel Bay, about 100 kilometers east of the accident scene, for hospitalization. The bodies of two other seamen were also recovered by the vessel.

Cape Town officials hoping to minimize the pollution danger to the southern Cape coast, said yesterday they had ordered the oil-trailing Oswego Guardian to stay at least 10 sea miles offshore. But pollution experts flown to the scene said there appeared to be little danger the tanker's crude oil spill would wash ashore, repeating last year's incident in which 26,000 tons of oil spilled by the tanker Wafra blanketed the southern Cape coast. They said weather reports indicated the wind was blowing in a westerly direction, taking the slick to sea.

The tanker was making about eight knots as she headed towards Cape Town with a German salvage tug close behind.

Jews uneasy in Belfast turmoil

ALTHOUGH Jewish businesses and shops have been badly damaged in the course of the long disturbances in Belfast, there have been no Jewish casualties. The latter fact is the result of pure chance — there was, for example, a Jewish family living only 100 yards from the recent "Bloody Friday" incident when a shopping parade was blown to pieces. This information is given in a picture of Belfast Jewry under fire by Gerald M. Smith that has appeared in the "Jewish Chronicle."

The 1,100-strong community lives mostly in one of those areas of the city that has been largely immune to the attacks and fighting. But their shops and offices are in the city centre and are in constant danger. Smith writes: "Belfast's Jews are a friendly, hospitable and in the main affluent community, but in their heart is a constant fear that if they should so much as step across the road to the local shops they might be shot down." He describes their attitude as fatalistic — but in the past 18 months, 13 families have emigrated to Israel, Australia, Canada or England. Of the 47 persons who left, at least 35 went for reasons of safety, abandoning their livelihoods. Some Belfast Jewish leaders do not agree that those who left were motivated by the situation. Smith feels that this is because they are afraid that will reflect on the Jewish community. But an inquiry into the reason for the departures does indicate that the fear of being shot at and blasted has played a strong part in these decisions. He notes that hundreds of Protestants and Catholics have crossed the sea to seek peace and safety in England.

The tense atmosphere in the city has almost killed off communal life. Dinners and dances are no longer held. The Jewish Institute, which was the focus of communal life, attracts few visitors (it backs on to an army depot). Charitable institutions have inevitably suffered. The synagogue grounds are not guarded — the authorities asked the police and army not to patrol the premises for fear that their presence might attract potential bombers and snipers.

When Jews go out, they travel by car — any other form of getting around is too risky. At night they are best at home or visit nearby friends arms come from Arab sources and Smith suggests a possible link between the official IRA and neo-Nazi elements. But, for the time being, this is speculation.

It should be added that Belfast is the only Jewish community in Northern Ireland. In the South, everything is as usual — except for a drop in tourism (as Israel has learned from experience, unrest in any area — however remote — deters tourists from visiting the country as a whole). Life in the Jewish community in Dublin — as in the entire city — is unaffected by the bloody events a couple of hundred miles to the north.

GREEK Jewry is facing a wave of anti-Semitism instigated by Greek Orthodox churchmen, according to Michael Segal, director of information of the World Conference of Jewish Organizations, writing in the "Young Israel Viewpoint." Following the vociferous protests of the Greek Jewish community to the Government, the official response was that the attacks against the Jews emanated from irresponsible persons — but the Government made no move to halt the continuation of these attacks.

No one seems to have a rational explanation for this recent outburst of anti-Semitism from Greek Orthodox sources. The Greek churchmen have even been trotting out the "Protocols of the Elders of Zion." There have been recurrent attacks by churchmen who condemn Rotarians and Freemasons as "secret organs of universal Judaism (or Zionism)" which seeks to attain world supremacy. "The Bishop of Chios has urged the high regime leaders to 'save Greece from the Christian Greeks.'" He declared: "The enemy stands before our gates. He is Satan in his conception and terrible in his execution. The Zionist finger, of which we have heard from certain protocols, hiding behind these secret organizations, influences youth organizations and brings about a loosening and blunting of the Orthodox conscience."

British ports begin to count the cost

LONDON (AP). — Nearly all of Britain's 42,000 dockers returned to work on Monday, ending a month-long stranglehold on the nation's port lifelines.

They immediately began unloading backlogged cargoes from more than 400 idled ships. The end of the strike lifted threats of economic chaos and food shortages for this island nation that lives by foreign trade.

But the total cost to Britain's fragile economy has yet to be calculated. Shipowners alone lost more than $1m. a day and exporters about $1,000m. in foreign sales.

The nation's foreign trade books have shown profits in only two of the first seven months of the year, a key factor behind the declining value of the pound since it was floated and fell on June 23.

August trade figures, to be released in early September, are expected to give the first precise idea of the economic damage from the dock strike.

Priority in the unloading job went to ships carrying grain and animal foodstuffs in critically short supply. They had been rationed during the strike as farmers fought to avoid mass slaughtering.

Food supplies had been stockpiled before the strike and there was little evidence of hoarding by housewives. Only imported fresh fruit and specialty items like Danish bacon were scarce.

In London, the nation's largest port, 14,000 dockers moved in to unload 231 idled ships. Six thousand dockers in Liverpool, the nation's second-largest port, resumed work only to find that a new strike by the clerical staff restricted operations. But 30 of the 50 ships idled there were being unloaded.

A local dispute in Aberdeen, involving about 100 dockers, slowed work there. Some London militants continued picketing container depots. On a nationwide basis, however, the return to work was virtually 100 per cent.

The settlement guarantees dockers about 200 more jobs at inland container depots. The work had been going to lower paid truck drivers while modern container handling methods were cutting the traditional work force in the ports. In addition, the dockers will receive a new scale of severance pay, up to a maximum of $9,800.

Moscow broils

Woman defies male stronghold

SALONICA, Greece (Reuter). — An Italian housewife was acquitted here yesterday on charges of invading the male sanctuary of Mount Athos, the peninsular state ruled by monks.

Mrs. Dina Zucchini, 40, from Bologna, told the Court of Misdemeanors that she landed with her family on a remote bay for a few minutes to refuel their rubber boat. She said she was not aware of the ban on women entering the area.

The law forbidding women from entering Mount Athos is a centuries-old provision of the holy community's charter respected by Greek civil courts.

The community is a state-within-a-state in Greece and enjoys autonomous status.

Several women have attempted to penetrate the Byzantine monastic republic, usually disguised as men, but have been evicted by monks before reaching the bastion's interior.

Barefoot doctors keep China's birthrate down

By Gamini Seneviratne
LONDON (Gemin). — THE People's Republic of China, the most populous country in the world, and way back in 2300 B.C.E. is a first country to hold a population census, has devised what experts of the International Family Planning Federation call "the best family planning programme in the world."

Mao's China originated the "vacuum aspiration technique" of pregnancy termination. It is rapidly becoming the preferred method throughout a world increasingly conscious of the dangers of uncontrolled population growth.

This year the International Family Planning Federation, a sort of national child of this world-consciousness, which today has a membership of 79 national associations, was invited for the first time to see how China is tackling its own growth.

Japanese scientists Professor Tamao Terao and Tameyoshi Katagiri, Regional Secretary IPPF West-Pacific Region, were for some weeks guests of the Chinese Medical Association. Their report was discussed by the 350 doctors and scientists who gathered in Sydney, Australia, between August 14 and 18 for the IPPF's first medical and scientific congress.

In London Tameyoshi Katagiri has spoken of the two main reasons behind the Chinese success — every woman method of population control is freely used and a highly effective system has been found for talking the service to the people.

In Sweden (0.8 per cent) and Yugoslavia (1.1 per cent) for example, abortion is legal but vasectomy is not. In Japan, where over-population is a problem, though growth rate (1.1 per cent) is relatively low, pills and IUDs are illegal.

In fact, the Chinese growth rate is nothing as high as is popularly imagined. In the 1963-69 period it was estimated at well below 2 per cent, probably the lowest in the whole of the vast region with the exception of Japan and the Soviet Union (1.1 per cent). It may be as low as half the 2.8 per cent of Taiwan.

Free availability of birth control methods is only half of the Chinese story. World experts like Dr. Malcolm Potts, Medical Director of IPPF in London, have often said that national programmes will not be successful unless they are geared to the peculiar local needs and take the service to the people.

"No other country in the world," says Katagiri of the Chinese, "has attempted to create a family planning movement which rests so genuinely on the initiative and self-reliance of the people themselves."

In China there are five official reasons for controlling family size:

1. To create a socialist country.
2. To have healthy children and mothers.
3. To create time for mothers to study and work.
4. To create maximum conditions for educating the next generation.
5. Because of its impact on the domestic economy.

The vehicle for carrying the "message" (and the contraceptives) is a unique corps of health workers called "barefoot doctors." There are about three million of these people, all with a basic training in simple medical techniques, involved in the Chinese family planning programme.

U.S. women's rights day: marching and bell ringing

By Jurate Kazickas
NEW YORK (AP). — WOMEN across America will march, rally and ring bells Saturday to celebrate the 52nd anniversary of the day they won the vote and to urge adoption of another constitutional amendment further guaranteeing the rights of females.

It was on August 26, 1920, that the U.S. completed ratification of the 19th Amendment to the Constitution, the one giving women the right to vote. Fifty years later, feminists organized the first women's strike for equality, now an annual event.

This year, organizers say they will concentrate on urging ratification of the proposed Equal Rights Amendment. The Amendment has been ratified by 20 states and rejected by two. It requires ratification by 38 states for passage.

Among the participants will be some organizations not usually identified with the Women's Liberation movement. Among them are the League of Women Voters, business and professional women and the American Association of University Women, all long-established American women's organizations.

"The movement has come of age," added Betty Friedan, pioneer feminist and organizer of the 1970 demonstration. "Women are at last entering the decision-making processes and that is an irreversible trend."

"Stage I of the movement through actions like the August 26 march made everyone aware that sex discrimination is wrong. Now we're into Stage II where we mean to change the institutions by our growing political power."

Led by the National Organization for Women (NOW), women in some cities, including New York, Chicago and Washington, plan a whole week of activities. Demonstrators have been urged to "ring the bells at four for more" on August 25. Feminists have asked governors and mayors to declare August 26 Women's Rights Day.

There will be feminist fairs in Chicago, Washington and Albany, N.Y.; seminars and workshops in Akron, Ohio; Omaha, Nebraska; and Indianapolis, Indiana.

Demonstrators in Chicago, Seattle, Washington, New Orleans and Pensacola, Florida, will stage national and dramatizations of women's role in history. Women in San Francisco and several other cities said they would forgo marches and rallies in favour of negotiations with city officials on specific demands for increased employment of women in civil service jobs and on city commissions.

ONLY HALF

Free availability of birth control methods is only half of the Chinese story. World experts like Dr. Malcolm Potts, Medical Director of IPPF in London, have often said that national programmes will not be successful unless they are geared to the peculiar local needs and take the service to the people.

"No other country in the world," says Katagiri of the Chinese, "has attempted to create a family planning movement which rests so genuinely on the initiative and self-reliance of the people themselves."

In China there are five official reasons for controlling family size:

1. To create a socialist country.
2. To have healthy children and mothers.
3. To create time for mothers to study and work.
4. To create maximum conditions for educating the next generation.
5. Because of its impact on the domestic economy.

The vehicle for carrying the "message" (and the contraceptives) is a unique corps of health workers called "barefoot doctors." There are about three million of these people, all with a basic training in simple medical techniques, involved in the Chinese family planning programme.

OMIT ONE

The great national programmes of other Asian countries, the report notes, almost invariably omit one or more methods. The Indians (2.5 per cent) do not use steroidal contraceptives. In Indonesia (2.5 per cent) condoms are not easily available and vasectomy and abortion are taboo.

Developed countries have similar paradoxes, though with lower rates of growth their need to control growth may be regarded as less important.

In Sweden (0.8 per cent) and Yugoslavia (1.1 per cent) for example, abortion is legal but vasectomy is not. In Japan, where over-population is a problem, though growth rate (1.1 per cent) is relatively low, pills and IUDs are illegal.

ON THE SPOT

As the report sees them: "They carry condoms and oral contraceptives and offer the pills to women while they are working in the fields. They assist qualified doctors at the time of abortion, sterilization and IUD insertion, and may insert IUDs themselves."

"One of the strengths of the Chinese programme is this system of field workers who belong to the community and who can do face-to-face motivation and contraceptive distribution."

Officially, as far as the world is concerned, the Chinese have been almost calculatedly coy about talking of the programme ever since it got under way in the late 1950s. In 1964 the Government set itself the target of reducing the growth rate to 1 per cent by the year 2000.

The IPPF experts say that some 85 to 90 per cent of Chinese couples are now practicing birth control, and "there is statistical evidence that birth rates are dropping rapidly to meet the explosive problem caused by the dramatic fall in death rates as a result of the vast modern network of health services."

Family planning in China is part of the Health Service.

The Heyman and Rebecca Prashker Pavilion for the severely handicapped was dedicated on Sunday in the Han Sport Centre for the Handicapped in Ramat Gan. Present were members of the Prashker Family of West New York, N.J., U.S.A., Mrs. Betty Dubiner, Mrs. Leah Rapoport, the chairman of Han, Mrs. Betty Dubiner, and Mr. Rafi Kotzer, Assistant to the Minister of Health. ## Middle East treats

By Molly Lyons Bar-David

A Terrazza is the fifth open restaurant, outdoors at the Tel Aviv Hilton. During the day — from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. — there are cream dishes, soft drinks, coffee, tea and cakes. But from 7.30 to 1 p.m. there is a wonderful meal — most foods done over the charcoal grill — and there are dozens of dishes to choose from. Executive chef Karl Hoermann, from Austria, has given a delicious slant to Middle East treats. The main dishes run from IL$5.50 to IL$4.50, and of course tax and service charge will be added.

Sashlik Georgian Style

10 grams lamb diced to 2 centimetre cubes, 1/2 onion, 1/2 green pepper, 1/2 tomato, bay leaves, salt and pepper. Olive oil and lemon juice.

Mix the olive oil with lemon juice and dip the meat cubes into it. Place on a plate, sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cover with onion slices, tomato slices and bay leaves. Refrigerate for about 4 to 5 hours. At the meat on metal skewers together with the onion, green pepper and tomato slices. Broil over charcoal. Turn it a couple of times.

Mediterranean Fish

150 grams sea bass or other sea fish, 40 grams tchina, 1/2 tomato, 1/2 green pepper, 1/2 lemon, 2 bay leaves, salt and pepper to taste.

Cut the fish into cubes. Put on a skewer one cube fish, 1 slice of tomato, 1 slice pepper, 1 bay leaf, and so on till all the fish cubes are fitted on the skewer. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Grill until gilded. Serve on a plate with French fried potatoes and Oriental salad.

Oriental Mixed Grill

50 grams lamb, 50 grams beef fillet, 50 grams turkey breast, 1/2 green pepper, 1 small tomato, salt and pepper.

Cut the meats into cubes. Put on a skewer: one cube lamb, 1 slice green pepper, one cube beef fillet, one slice pepper, one cube turkey, one slice pepper, one cube tomato, one cube beef, and so on until all the ingredients are on the skewer. Grill over charcoal grill and serve the skewer on a plate with fried potatoes and Oriental salad.

Stuffed Vine Leaves

1/2 kilo tinned vine leaves (or if you wish you can buy these vine leaves salted in the open markets). You can also use fresh vine leaves. Dip them in hot water with vinegar for a few minutes. 550 grams rice, 150 grams olive oil, 2 squeezed lemons, 1 finely chopped onion, 1 tbsp. chopped parsley, 1 tsp. chopped dill, 1 tsp. chopped fresh mint leaves, 50 grams raisins, 50 grams pine nuts (or if you wish you can use silvered almonds) salt and pepper to taste.

Heat the oil. Add the chopped onion, nuts and raisins. Cook until the onion is glazed. Add the rice and continue cooking until the rice is glazed. Remove from fire. Add the chopped parsley, dill, and chopped mint leaves. Add salt and pepper to taste. Mix well. Add 2 1/2 cups water and let it cook on low fire until the rice absorbs the water (about 15 minutes). Put the vine leaves side by side on a cloth and put a spoon of rice filling and roll the vine leaf over the rice forming a small oblong packet. Cover the bottom of a casserole with open vineleaves. Place the small stuffed packets in a narrow circle on the leaves and proceed in this manner until all the stuffed vineleaves have been placed in the casserole. Add the lemon juice, some water and oil, cover with a few loose vine leaves. Place an inverted plate on it. Cover with a lid and place the casserole in a moderate oven for 45 to 60 minutes. Let it cool. Place the stuffed vine leaves on a tray and serve as hors d'oeuvre.

Hilbeh

2 tbsp. fenugreek seeds, 1/2 tsp. s'chuk, puree of one fresh tomato. Grind the seeds in a medium texture is achieved, or pound them very fine. Leave in water 2 hours. Pour off the water. Add the s'chuk, tomato puree and some water. If you wish to keep the hilbeh at all, warm it over the fire, stirring continuously. When the mixture begins to boil, remove fire and allow to cool.

Yemenite Sauce — S'chuk

The Hilton makes it fiery with sharp red pepper salad, turmeric, soy sauce, kabbab spice and many more fiery things. However, here is my recipe:

Garlic, hot chili peppers, black peppercorns, cumin, cardamom seed, coriander, salt, 1 kilo chopped tomatoes, and some Fenugreek — Hilbeh sauce.

Mix the tomatoes with the above spices in quantities to suit your taste. Then mix with hilbeh (fenugreek sauce) or tchina.

Eggplant in Tchina

Eggplant, tchina, ground garlic, chopped parsley, salt and pepper, carcum.

Bake eggplant in oven, or grill over flame until the skin is burnt and mix with tchina. Add garlic. Remove the skin. Mash the eggplant, salt, pepper, parsley and carcum.

Felsafel

Chickpeas, coriander, 1 clove chopped garlic, cumin, powdered strong red pepper, flour, salt.

Soak the chickpeas in water overnight. Mash and grind. Mix with coriander, powdered garlic, cumin, pepper and salt. Add flour and mix well. Form the dough form small balls, each one 3 cms. in diameter and fry in very hot oil until brown. Serve with tchina and salad or humus.

ISRAEL'S TOE-HOLD IN THE COMPUTER TRADE

By DR. MOSHE ATER
Jerusalem Post Economic Editor

HE idea of producing computers in Israel sounds ludicrous. Of modern industries, this is not the most sophisticated, but also one most dependent on economies of scale. In no other field is it so crucial for viability. European companies, backed by huge subsidies and preferential treatment in their governments, have been able to break the dominance of M and other American giants. It would seem foolish of us even to try.

However, once one descends from idealities to practice, the matter is less like a pipe dream. Now here is going to challenge any of the companies offering complete packages of data processing equipment. Israel has neither the resources required for developing such facilities, nor the remaining dependent on foreign expertise as regards basic elements, we may have a good chance to compete in the production of individual items, in particular in the field of software, which must be re-years ago the situation in this respect was far from satisfactory, and a survey carried out by the Institute of Productivity envisaged a severe shortage of manpower capable of handling and realizing the capabilities of data processing equipment by the mid-70s. However, since then local training facilities have been considerably expanded, and interest in computer courses and careers has grown. Moreover, a number of computer experts have immigrated (from the U.S., Europe and South Africa) or have established contacts with organizations here indicating their readiness to come if suitable jobs will be provided.

Between 1969 and 1970 the number of professionals engaged in this industry (including managers, system analysts, designers and programmers) was found to have increased by one-third. Further increases have doubtless taken place to date. In December, 1970 average income of data processing personnel — including computer and terminal operators — ranged between IL900 and IL1,250 a month, and was on the lower side of the European wage level. By now salaries have risen, by say 30 per cent, but most of this must have been offset for the sake of international comparison — by last year's devaluation.

Israel's rapidly increasing home use of data processing is also of substantial importance for developing local production. Small though the respective volume is, it is growing by leaps and bounds.

The country's expenditure on rent or maintenance of computer equipment almost doubled between 1967 and 1969, and doubled again between then and 1972, quite apart from the defence spending. It may be currently approaching IL200m., involving, say, $15m. in foreign currency. By 1976 these figures are expected to treble. But already now, the local market provides a demand for some small size original developments, in particular in defence projects and in those connected with overseas programmes both of which can afford to be expensive. A case in point is the locally perfected controlling equipment of the Gabriel missile. Another locally developed missile computer control — ISAC-77 — has not yet been put to use, but was shown at the recent Manover Fair. A software package for typesetting and keyboarding was developed by Natam Ltd. for the "Encyclopaedia Judaica" and later sold also to a firm producing a directory in Greece. Elbit's Validata system (costing $30,000 to $50,000) has also been constructed in response to local demand, and most of the production has been sold here. Other instances of locally developed hardware components have been Elita Electronics' MISC logic and MOS memory.

Indeed, the soaring home demand, both of commercial firms and public bodies, seems to have provided enough employment for our software producers, so that they have been reluctant to export. When the idea of jumping on the computer bandwagon was first suggested (at the Jerusalem Conference of 1968), it was presumed that slim though our chances may be as regards hardware, software exports could be expanded substantially. However, actual development has been the opposite. In 1969 and 1970 software exports averaged $100,000, and though they have risen since, mainly to Europe and to developing countries — the respective amounts are still so small that marketing costs abroad handicap further expansion.

JOIN FORCES

Only lately have producers begun to join forces for promoting sales and tendering overseas. On the other hand, export of Elbit small computers, of disc drives produced by the Xerox Haifa subsidiary and of several other hardware items, minis, minicomputers, components) produced here, is already running into millions of dollars. It stands to reason that the situation will change in the course of time, unless one of the major computer companies chooses to make this country a base for their world-wide production. But even the above figures show that our computer industry need not be confined to the local market.

Owing perhaps to this industry's complexity and to the difficulty of drawing a clear line between production and service, no complete data are available concerning output, investments, etc. Software is produced by about 25 firms employing about 300 professionals, while the number of hardware producers may be a dozen. One significant feature of this industry is, however, worth mentioning, namely, the close links already existing between the Israeli firms and some of the major firms abroad. Thus Elbit is controlled by the Control Data Corporation (while 49.9 per cent of it is held by the Discount Bank Investment Corporation). The Haifa disc drives company is a subsidiary of Xerox. Several of the software producers are affiliates or joint ventures of reputed foreign — mostly American — firms. This close cooperation has doubtless helped our industry to advance rapidly although it may have also handicapped its export performance.

Minister of Labour Yosef Almogi was taken on a tour of Lifeline for the Aged workshops in Jerusalem yesterday by the organization's founder, Mrs. Miriam Mendelow.

More workshops for the aged

By AARON SITTNER
Jerusalem Post Reporter

The Labour Ministry will establish a string of workshops throughout the country for use by pensioners, Minister of Labour Yosef Almogi, said in Jerusalem yesterday.

Speaking with reporters during a visit to the offices of the voluntary organization Lifeline for the Aged, Mr. Almogi noted that there are 200,000 old people in Israel and their proportion in the general population will rise steadily.

"The time to think of these people's needs is right now," Mr. Almogi said. "The workshops we are planning will serve a twofold purpose. They will enable retired folks to aid us as long as there is a labour shortage and will also offer them a place to enjoy their hobbies and avocations, if that is what they are interested in."

A LONG WAY
Mr. Almogi also predicted that the proposed laws on pensions, rehabilitation and compulsory health insurance would go a long way in helping the country meet the needs of its senior citizens.

The Minister, obviously impressed by what he saw at the Lifeline centre, heaped praise on the volunteer directors of the institution and said it could serve as a model for similar agencies throughout the nation. He said his Ministry would help Lifeline's budget by paying the salaries of its vocational instructors. The centre, founded eight years ago by a Jerusalem school teacher, now serves 400 persons — old people, some of them handicapped.

Mrs. Miriam Mendelow, the founder of Lifeline for the Aged, led the Minister on a tour of the centre's workshops, where he saw scores of aged Jerusalemites — one of them 93-years-old — working in a bindery, sewing shop, ceramics workshop, metalworking room, box factory and silal weaving plant.

Each worker is paid a daily wage of IL4 and is entitled to free dental, ophthalmic and chiropody services at the centre. All of the products are offered for sale at competitive prices both at the centre's own retail shop at 23 Rehov Shivtei Yisrael, and at gift shops throughout the country.

The idea of paying the members a piecework wage was rejected in order not to embarrass handicapped persons who could not produce as much as other members.

Mrs. Mendelow recalled the birth of the centre. She said she had noticed how her students would ridicule the old men and women on the streets near the school in Mahane Yehuda.

"The only way to prevent this, I thought, was by making the old people appear productive in the eyes of the children. I started this place with a handful of people and two pledges of official aid — IL150 daily from the Jerusalem Municipality and IL1-plus-a-teacher from the Labour Ministry. Our first project was a book bindery. The reason was simple: to show the young people that the books they damage are repaired by those same old people whom they used to look down upon."

Mrs. Mendelow said the centre today sponsors home industries for old people unable to leave their homes and a meals-on-wheels programme which distributes hot food to bedridden persons throughout the Capital.

"But our main aim is to give old people a purpose in life, a sense of doing something," she said. "Our motto is, 'God, if I am to die tomorrow, let me work today.'"

trip as prize

A group of 45 Ampa dealers left this week for a tour of Scandinavia, where they will be competing for excellence in sales of Amcor electric appliances.

The winners were singled out from 400 sales representatives under Ampa's special award system. (Among the outstanding dealers is Mr. Eli Abu Saleh, a 30-year-old merchant from Tulkarm. The group, headed by Ampa representative Dani Elman, is flying by El Al, which recently joined other large international airlines in establishing such incentive flights.
